

A generation is opening the Bible. Let's not leave them reading alone.

Call2All runs toward clear finish lines: every people group reached, the Bible accessible to all, a church in every community, the gospel to every person. Schools gather a whole generation five days a week. To reach every student, the Bible has to be more than available there. It has to be opened, heard and talked about.

The hunger is real, and access has never been easier: one Bible app alone has passed a billion installs. But curiosity is not yet habit. In 2026 the American Bible Society found Scripture engagement settling back from 20% to 17%, and pointed to how hard new habits are to form. A generation willing to ask a chatbot about God needs the Word heard in a room, among people who know their name.

"People who newly opened the Bible last year may have since closed it. But they themselves remain open."

American Bible Society researchers, State of the Bible 2026

THREE CALLS FOR EVERY SCHOOL

1 Read more.

From verses to the whole story.

Students often meet Scripture in fragments: a verse on a wall, a thought for the day. The Bible is one story, and it needs reading in runs long enough to feel its shape.

"They searched the Scriptures day after day."

ACTS 17:11 NLT

2 Read aloud.

Let the Word be heard.

Most of Scripture was written to be heard in a gathered room. Reading aloud slows the eye, wakes the ear, and gives quieter students a voice.

"God blesses the one who reads the words of this prophecy to the church, and he blesses all who listen."

REVELATION 1:3 NLT

3 Read together.

Make Scripture a reason to gather.

At the Water Gate, Ezra read the Law aloud and the Levites helped the crowd understand. Students who hear and discuss it together notice what they would miss alone.

"... clearly explained the meaning of what was being read, helping the people understand each passage."

NEHEMIAH 8:8 NLT

A FINISH LINE FOR ONE SCHOOL YEAR

Picture the last day of the school year. Every student has heard the whole story of Scripture read aloud, in their own voice and their friends' voices, and has talked about it with people who care. In a finish-line movement, some is not success. Not some students. Every student. Adopt one school, start one reading circle, and let it multiply.

Many tools can serve these three calls.

Overleaf: one free app built for exactly this, and how a school can start this week.

One story. Four colours. Every student has a part.

In 1899 a publisher printed the words of Jesus in red. SourceView Together, a free Bible app, gives every voice in Scripture its own colour, so a class can read a story aloud in parts. No word is added, moved or removed.

HOW IT SERVES THE THREE CALLS

- 1 Read more
365 complete stories, Genesis to Revelation. The median story takes 10 minutes, so a whole story fits inside form time. A 180-story plan walks a class through the arc of Scripture in one school year.
- 2 Read aloud
Every line is coloured by who said it. Your turns light up and the rest dims, so reading aloud feels like a script, not a test.
- 3 Read together
Four students take a colour each and the colours do the coordination. Every story ends with four questions written for a school room, plus family and small-group sets.

WHERE IT FITS IN A SCHOOL WEEK

Form time

One story, ten minutes, four readers.

Chapel

Students read up front while the school listens.

Bible & RE class

Run the school-year plan, then the four questions.

Clubs & home

Student-led clubs where allowed. Family sets for home.

BEFORE YOU ASK A PRINCIPAL OR SAFEGUARDING LEAD

Free, with no ads and nothing to buy. No accounts, no sign-in, and no personal data leaves the device. The English Bible (NLT) ships inside the app, so a lesson never depends on the school network.

One tool among many. Use it alongside the reading plans, printed Bibles, Scripture memory and Bible clubs already serving your schools. It does one thing especially well: it turns a room of students into a reading circle.

Try it this week: four colleagues, one story.

Open story 255, Nineveh Spared!, the whole book of Jonah. Six minutes, four colours, then the four questions. Next week, take it to one class.
