

Thirty teenagers. One period. One story, read out loud.

SourceView Together colours the whole Bible by who is speaking. Hand four students a colour each and a chapter of Acts becomes something the room performs — with no preparation, no accounts and no cost.

FOUR ROLES, FOUR COLOURS

Narrator

Carries the story between the speeches

God

Divine speech, including Jesus

Named people

Moses, Ruth, Peter, Paul — anyone named

Everyone else

Crowds, soldiers, unnamed voices

A student never has to work out whether it is their turn. Their colour is on the screen in front of them, so reading aloud carries no social risk.

WHAT YOU ARE GETTING

365

complete stories, Genesis to Revelation, covering the whole text

10 min

the median story; none runs longer than 14

180

stories in the plan built for an academic year

4

discussion questions per story, written for a classroom

WHAT HAPPENS IN THE ROOM

1

Open the story

Everyone opens the same story on their own device. Nothing to join, no code to read out.

2

Take a colour

Four students take a colour each. Their turns light up; everything else dims. Rotate the colours next week.

3

Talk about it

Four questions written for a school room appear at the end. No preparation, and nothing to print.

BEFORE YOU ASK IT OR YOUR SAFEGUARDING LEAD

Free. No accounts, no sign-in and no personal data leaves the device — there is nothing to administer and no user records to hold. The English Bible ships inside the app, so a lesson does not depend on the school network.

Start with one class and one story.

Try “God’s Story: The Good News” — seven stories, one week. Or begin the 180-story school-year plan at the start of term.
